(Part I: pages 1-3213; Part II, pages 3214-3460)

S. Robert Powell

There are 3,460 pages in this journal; much larger, by a long shot, than any of my journals in recent years.

2002 has been a scanning project for many weeks: two or three hundred pages at a sitting. But it's finally finished—and that is good.

The year 2003 remains to be done—and that will get me up to date with journal scanning. The period 2004-2009, inclusive, has already been scanned. For 2010, I have been scanning as I go, more or less. That way, at the end of the year I will not be confronted by a large scanning project.
